

A More Convenient Day

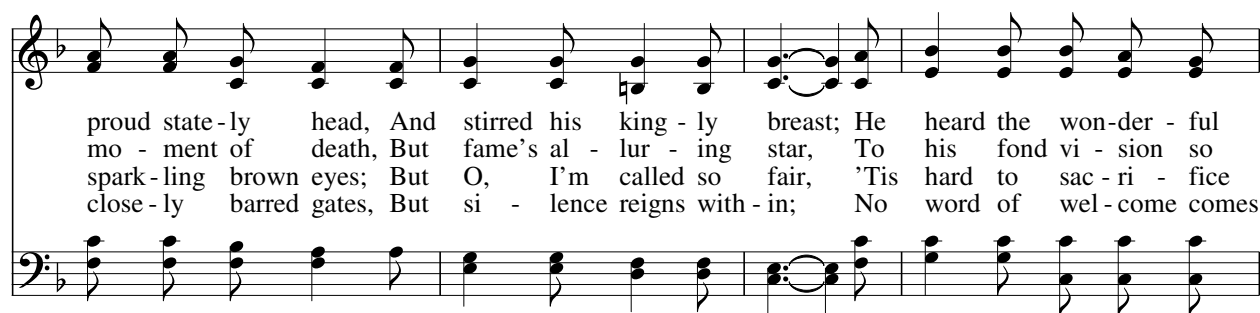

Lou S. Bedford, alt. by H. N. Lincoln, 1897

Horace Neely Lincoln

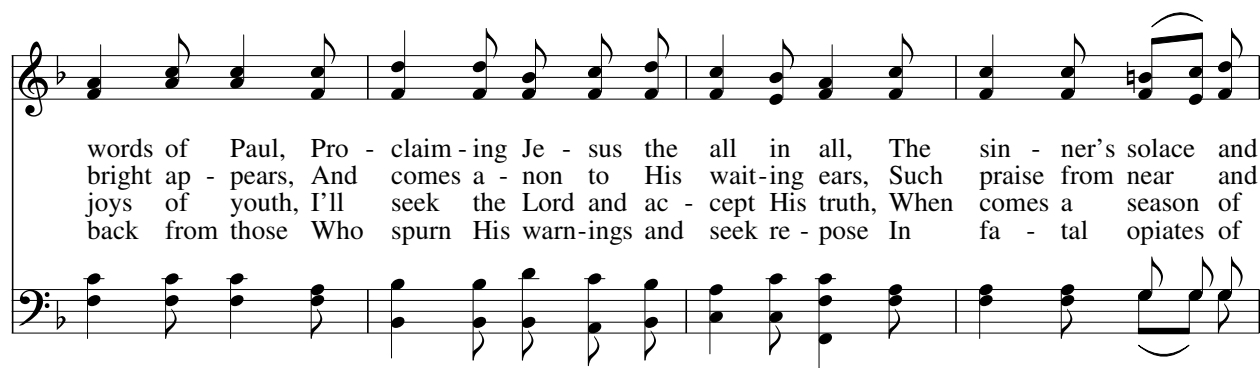

♩=105

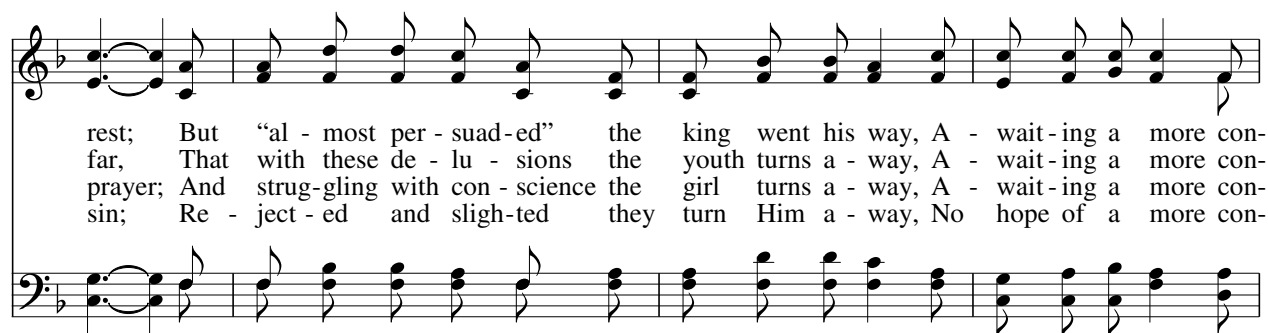

1. "Al-most per - suad-ed," A - grip - pa said; Con - vict - ion hum - bled his
 2. "Al-most per - suad-ed," with bat - ed breath, The young man thinks of the
 3. "Al-most per - suad-ed," the maid-en cries, And wipes the tears from her
 4. "Al - most per - suad-ed," the Spir - it waits, And knocks, and knocks at the proud state-ly head, And stirred his king - ly breast; He heard the won-der - ful mo - ment of death, But fame's al - lur - ing star, To his fond vi - sion so spark-ling brown eyes; But O, I'm called so fair, 'Tis hard to sac - ri - fice close-ly barred gates, But si - lence reigns with - in; No word of wel - come comes words of Paul, Pro - claim - ing Je - sus the all in all, The sin - ner's solace and bright ap - pears, And comes a - non to His wait-ing ears, Such praise from near and joys of youth, I'll seek the Lord and ac - cept His truth, When comes a season of back from those Who spurn His warn-ings and seek re - pose In fa - tal opiates of rest; But "al - most per - suad-ed" the king went his way, A - wait-ing a more con-far, That with these de - lu - sions the youth turns a - way, A - wait-ing a more con-prayer; And strug-gling with con - science the girl turns a - way, A - wait-ing a more consin; Re - ject - ed and sligh-ted they turn Him a - way, No hope of a more con-

Refrain

- ven-ient day.
 - ven-ient day. A more con-ven - ient day, A more con-ven - ient day, A-
 - ven-ient day. A more con - ven-ient day, A more con - ven-ient day,
 - ven-ient day.

- las! how ma-ny are go-ing a - stray, A - wait-ing a more con - ven-ient day.